October Bulletin 2013

The market garden is now more than double in size with the new tractor implements working a treat. Mulch, fertiliser and irrigation are now in place and seed catalogues are again being mulled over. Melanie, our new tenant has chosen her two rows and I think that means that there just has to be a line of flowers, perhaps two!

The olives continue to flower well and all the pruning and fertilising is now beginning to pay off. After the storm last week everything has taken on that lushes summer look and the greenness of the grass almost hurts your eyes.

We were blessed with a weekend visit by a family who buys our olive oil. It was such a joy to hear the children experience life on the farm. And Sarah was in her element having three inquisitive and responsive young children sharing her love of the property.

From our place to yours,
Alexina.
